The "surrealist house" was first conceived by Julien Levy, a New York art dealer who was inspired by the 1938 Exposition Internationale du Surréalisme in Paris. The house intended to convey the core tenants of surrealism to a mass audience, combining humor and artifice with the popular fair ride and allowing surrealist artists a space for experimentation.

The Dream, 1931 by Salvador Dali. Courtesy of www.dalipaintings.com. The Dream gives visual form to the strange, often disturbing world of dreams and hallucinations. Ants cluster over the face of the central figure, obscuring the mouth, while the sealed, bulging eyelids suggest the sensory confusion and frustration of a dream. The man at the far left - with a bleeding face and amputated left foot - refers to the classical myth of Oedipus, who unwittingly killed his father and married his mother.
