Teaching your kids to follow their gut instincts can help keep them safe, healthy, and happy both in childhood and beyond.

"Teaching kids how to trust their own inner guidance versus seeking outside sources that so often can be conflicting with our own wants and needs, is a helpful tool as they grow and develop," says Sylvester.

Teaching children the Catholic values of philanthropy and charity when they are impressionable might help stave off some of that adolescent cynicism which will inevitably occur as they get older. More importantly, it will inculcate in them a life-long pattern of thinking of how they can help children and families in desperate situations.
