Government (HC 107)' examines the performance of the Cabinet Office, HM Treasury HMT and the Prime Minister's Office (Number 10) as an effective centre of government. A strong and effective centre of government is vital for the effective operation of government as a whole and for ensuring a focus on improved value for money for the taxpayer.

Report of government in a way which meets their needs. The last two prime ministers have deliberately sought to change the way Number 10 operated from their predecessor's model – but then had to change again as events revealed that their new structures were inadequate.

~~The centre of government | The Institute for Government~~

The centre of government has responsibility for coordinating and overseeing the work of government, enabling it to achieve its strategic aims and ensuring there is a central view of the effective operation of government as a whole. Most of these strategic functions are performed by the Cabinet Office

~~Report~~

The center of government (CoG) is the institution or group of institutions that provide direct support to the chief executive (president or prime minister) in leading the management of government. Unlike line ministries and other government agencies, the CoG does not deliver services directly to the citizens, and it does not focus on a specific policy area.

The eighteenth and nineteenth centuries were periods of tremendous changes in how European thinkers and political leaders defined the role of government and the individual's relation to it. As early as the seventeenth century, British political theorists such as Thomas Hobbes and John Locke developed new philosophies of government, responding to the English Civil War and Glorious Revolution.

In the middle of the 19th century Britain was the richest and most powerful nation in the world.
However, in the late 19th century Britain's power declined. It was inevitable. Britain was the first country to industrialize. She, therefore, had a head start over other nations. However, other countries began to catch up.
