Why Only Humans Weep: Unravelling the Mysteries of Tears ...

Abstract. This book addresses the question why humans are the only animal species that produce emotional tears. The book brings together relevant theories and research from very different disciplines varying from clinical psychiatry to evolutionary biology and even the neurosciences and anthropology. Specific attention is devoted to the evolutionary origins of crying, the (neuro)biological aspects, antecedents, intra- and interpersonal differences, individual and gender differences in crying

This chapter discusses the different aspects and facets of crying. The need for a multidisciplinary approach is emphasized and a model is introduced that helps to obtain a better understanding of how a crying episode may develop and which factors may come into play. The model — with a cognitive emotion model as the core - makes a distinction between antecedents, appraisal, reactions, intra ...
